1. I claim the name "Baseball Quick" as our trademark. The name is an integral part of our invention and describes in 2 words how a fan can view a baseball game. "Baseball Quick" is a method of recording and editing a baseball game by showing only the last pitch to each batter and any subsequent action. Any action between the last pitch of any batter to the last pitch of another batter shall also be recorded. The result shall be a complete game of every player at bat in approximately 15 minutes.
2. I claim that this method of dispensing a baseball game can be used in the following medias. Television, Radio, Internet, Telephone, and Pagers.
3. I claim there are many ways "Baseball Quick" can be shown or heard. For example it can be dispensed, a) inning by inning while the game is in progress, b) 3rd inning, or 6th inning review while the game is in progress, or c) the whole game shown or heard after the game is over, d) all of the above can also be dispensed on the internet, telephone, pay per view or any hand held device. Finally, all these methods can be repeated at prime time slots or the next morning.

1 4. A method of recording and editing a baseball game in which players from 2 each side appear at bat, in turn, and attempt to place a pitched baseball into play
3 and reach base safely; with players failing to reach base safely being out and 4 players on base attempting unsuccessfully to advance to another base being out; the 5 method comprising:

6 recording the appearances-at-bat for each player, in turn, plus other action
7 that ensues during or after the appearances-at-bat;

8 editing the recorded appearances-at-bat to leave only the last pitch thrown to 9 each player, plus any action ensuing after that pitch and any attempts of runners on 10 base to advance to another base; and

11 presenting the edited recorded game as a condensed recorded game showing 12 important action portions of the game.

1 5. The method according to Claim 4 wherein said editing includes omitting all
2 pitches that do not result in either the player at bat placing the ball into play,
3 producing an out, or the player at bat or another player on base advancing to 4 another base.

1 6. The method according to Claim 4 wherein the edited recorded game is about 2 15 minutes for a nine-inning game.

1 7. The method according to Claim 4 wherein said edited recorded game
